U.N. troops enforce truce in Gorazde

by Maud S. Beelman
The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - U.N. troops evacuated wounded civilians and fanned out across besieged Gorazde to enforce a truce Sunday. The United Nations said Bosnian Serbs had met NATO's demand to pull back from the city.

Truce in Bosnia

- ✓ The UN said Bosnian Serbs had met NATO's demand to pull back from Sarajevo.
- ✓ On Saturday, the UN refused NATO request for authorization to bomb in response to heavy Serb shelling.
- ✓ More than 700 people were killed in the three-week Serb offensive.

NATO issued an ultimatum Friday ordering Serbs to stop their assault on Gorazde immediately or face air attacks. The Serbs were given until early Sunday to withdraw their forces from the town, the center of a Muslim enclave in eastern Bosnia.

The top U.N. official for former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, said in a statement after the NATO deadline passed that the situation had not required air strikes. On Saturday, the United Nations refused a NATO request for authorization to bomb in response to heavy Serb shelling.

Despite the reported Serb withdrawal, two women were killed and 15 were wounded by Serb sniper fire Sunday, Bosnian government radio reported. There was also sporadic mortar fire and a Serb infantry attack.

More than 700 people have been killed in the three-week Serb offensive.

But U.N. officials said the situation quieted as the day wore on. U.N. spokesman Maj. Eric Chaperon said Serbs were respecting the terms of a cease-fire they had agreed to and were withdrawing 1.9 miles (three kilometers) from Gorazde's center.

"The U.N. peacekeeping units that have moved out in the three-kilometer area covered by the agreement have not found a Serb presence," he said, in a clear indication that the likelihood of NATO air strikes had faded.

"The fact is that virtually all of the ultimatum has been complied with. They're trying to comply with it," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Car bomb blows in Johannesburg

ANC headquarters damaged, at least nine people left dead

by Donna Bryson
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - A car bomb exploded in downtown Johannesburg Sunday, killing at least nine people, damaging the headquarters of the African National Congress, and terrorizing South Africans just two days before the first all-race election.

No one claimed responsibility for the blast, which also wounded about 100 people. Suspicions fell on white extremists - the last, stubborn hold-outs to the election that will usher in black-majority rule.

Political leaders from several parties appealed for calm.

"I don't want you to concentrate on the violent action of those people who want to disrupt the process," ANC President Nelson Mandela said at a huge rally in Durban that culminated his campaign for the nation's highest office.

"We're going to deal with those people. We have made fantastic progress, despite criminals and murderers."

The ANC was expected to win the election, the first in South African history to include the black majority. Right-wing extremists opposed to black majority rule have threatened drastic action before voting begins.

The present white-led government, expected to share power with the ANC in the next administration, said it was resolved to go ahead with the voting, which begins Tuesday and ends Thursday.

"Those who believe that they will prevent or disrupt the election by such terrorism have completely missed the bus," Law and Order Minister Hernus Kriel said in a statement.

One of those killed was an ANC provincial legislature candidate, Susan Keane, who was driving into the ANC regional office for a meeting when the bomb went off. Other victims were pedestrians near the blast site.

A spokesman for the militant right-wing Afrikaner Resistance Movement denied the group was involved.

The blast, the biggest ever to hit Johannesburg, renewed fears of raging violence during the election - fears that had been quelled by the last-minute decision of the Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party to take part in the vote. Inkatha's decision left only right-wing extremists boycotting the ballot.

A car lies in flames after a huge explosion in downtown Johannesburg near the headquarters of the African National Congress on Sunday. The explosion, said by police to have been caused by some 200 pounds of explosives, killed at least four people and injured many others.

three ANC election workers were killed Saturday and eight were missing after a shooting in Ulundi, the capital of the Zulu homeland.

Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, who agreed last week to end the party's boycott of the balloting, joined in condemning the violence Sunday.

He appealed to his supporters: "The IFP gains absolutely nothing from violence. ... Let the election run its course and let it be free and fair."

The attack did not bear hallmarks of militant black groups, who have tended to focus on white targets, either civilian or military. Most of the victims

Sunday were black. White right-wingers are known to possess explosives and to be experts at using them.

The blast "could herald an attempt by the right-wing to make the country ungovernable," military analyst Helmoed-Romer Heitman said.

Group works for sales increase

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - Gov. George Voinovich and representatives from 37 business, professional, agricultural and trade organizations have begun their six-day mission.

The state-sponsored trip was planned to help Ohio increase its annual sales of Ohio-made products and services to Mexico from $1 million to $10 million within five years.

Among those flying down with Voinovich on Saturday were representatives from Chrysler, Ford and General Motors; a law firm; a telecommunications company; numerous manufacturers, universities and Christmas tree farmers; and the Ohio Corn Growers Association.

Richard Jacob, president of BriskHeat Corp., a Columbus company that makes heating elements for manufacturing, said traveling with a governor can open doors for companies like his.

"We looked at the level of contacts that a governor's mission provides, and we said we want to be there," Jacob said.

Nixon will be missed by some

"In the end what matters is that you have always lived life to the hilt. I have won some great victories and suffered some devastating defeats. But win or lose, I feel fortunate to have come to that time in my life when I can finally enjoy what my Quaker grandmother would have called 'peace at the center.'"

— from Richard Nixon's 1990 book "In the Arena"

The country will be observing a national day of mourning Wednesday for former President Nixon who died Friday, four days after suffering a stroke.

It has been 20 years since Lyndon B. Johnson passed away -- that was the last time this country has had to see a president die.

But Nixon's death strikes a different chord in the hearts of "Generation X youth," as his administration was the first of their lifetimes. Unfortunately, the administration was also the most tainted of the generation's lifetime.

Nixon announced his resignation of the office of the presidency on Aug. 9, 1974, the only president to ever do so. He resigned in the wake of a coverup of a "third-rate" burglary of the Watergate Hotel and the Democratic headquarters.

The event placed a mark on the office of the presidency and sent a message to a generation that no one is beyond fault. His resignation has placed the office of the president under an intense amount of scrutiny by the American public.

In the first few years following his resignation, the Nixons lived in virtual seclusion. But over the last 15 years, Nixon did a tremendous job of reviving his name to a stature at which it should always have been held.

The future will be built upon the experiences and lives of a generation that has grown up with a scandal to accompany every administration. However, Nixon will not be looked upon as the President who ruined the sanctity of the office. Rather, Nixon will be viewed as a great leader whose life mirrored the humanity in everyone, flaws and all.

Regaining our lost identity

America is under siege.

No, we are not under siege like Bosnia-Herzegovina. America is under siege in a cultural war that has our society wrestling with itself. Not even Steven Seagal can save us from this one. We are in a cultural war that has reached a point of anarchy, where everything is accepted as the norm and such principles as absolute truths have been thrown out the window. America has no role models who can assert themselves with their integrity, and give others examples to live by.

America, Generation X in particular, has no role models who live a virtuous life. The media has made the late Nirvana singer Kurt Cobain into a role model and spokesperson for Generation X. He was neither a role model, nor a spokesperson. Kurt Cobain was a joke and a pathetic waste of life. Sorry Nirvana fans, but that's the truth. Kurt Cobain never spoke for me, and was the furthest thing from what I would consider a role model. Cobain definitely had talent, but he screwed up his life with drugs and alcohol.

Now, I could fill up this page with statistics, but that isn't quite necessary. Everyone knows the sad grim stories that fill up the newspapers and nightly newscast. We see every aspect of this cultural war every day, and it surrounds each and every one of us. Every cultural indicator that should be down is up, and every cultural indicator that is down should be up. This sounds like a flashback to one of Bill Clinton and Al Gore's 1992 campaign speeches. What they spoke of was economic indicators (which was nothing but lies, but anyhow); the issues here are the cultural tragedies that affect each and every one of us. Statistics continually show the rise of suicide, murder, rape, divorce, sexually-transmitted diseases, illegitimate births and the list could go on.

What is the cause for all these dreadful truths that makes our society look so bleak?

The first reason is because there is a lack of individual responsibility. Many people take the easy way out rather than face their problems. Kurt Cobain's life was filled with problems and he took the easy way out by killing himself. Some other areas that people take the easy way out are divorce and abortion. Another area missing in many individuals is accountability, where each person is liable for their actions. Individuals that contribute to driving statistics up fail to be able to answer for their unintelligent and deviant behavior.

The second reason is due to the lack of morality and absolute truths in this society. Such sound and basic principles as the ten commandments is seriously lacking in this country. These fundamental principles are deficient in many people's lives, which explains the result of the rise of murder, rape and STD's. America will continue to be a demoralized country as long as we continue to lack absolute truths.

There continues to be a shortage of responsibility in people when it comes to sex. This is why we see the threat of STD's are statistically on the rise. There is a movement on campus to get a class on sex education mandatory for all students. What this shows is that many lack responsibility in their lives and it needs to be taught. If you get AIDS or any other venereal disease, it is your own stupid fault. We don't need a mandatory class that tells us if we don't practice safe sex we run the risk of getting AIDS. That is common sense. Not even safe sex is 100 percent failproof. So, you have to use your head, and know, that you know, what you know, before you do anything stupid.

Are there any solutions to America's societal problems? I believe there are, and I found it etched in stone on the east side of the McFall building. These wise words are:

Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind. Schools and the means of education shall be forever encouraged.

Religion, morality and knowledge are three essential entities that are necessary in order for America to regain stability in the losing cultural war. They are required in the respective order that they are mentioned, because one follows the other. If you take one out, the whole equation goes out of sync. Religion, morality, and knowledge go hand in hand.

Why are all three so important? Religion is important for the well-being of every individual. Now, I'm not advocating anything radical here, or suggest that you should become a monk or a nun. What I am advocating is that religion and faith in God is a solution to many of America's social ills. With religion, suicide, murder, rape and STD's wouldn't be out of control.

Morality is the next principal step, for it follows religion. Morality and absolute truths are seriously lacking in this country. There are absolute rights and absolute wrongs, and they exist for our benefit. They are not oxymorons. With moral principles a person would know that it is wrong to do the many things that have wreaked havoc upon our country.

Knowledge is last, but equally as important. With knowledge one has the power to know the truth. These knowledgeable truths can set America free from the cultural war that we are in. These truths can be found in religion and morality, and they are the basics we need to return to.

This country continues to search for answers for all the problems that exist, but most come up with nothing. Much of what I have just said is the truth, whether you accept it or not. It is important for people to understand and realize this. On the west side of the McFall building there is another proverbial truth, and it is written as follows:

That this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from this earth. This is my dream.

Students and responsibility

Parties asked to be courteous of their neighbors in community

The long Bowling Green winter is over, and more agreeable weather is finally arriving. This is the time of year when many University students will want to have parties and celebrate the coming end of the spring semester.

We in the University Administration and City Government are pleased that you chose the University for your college careers. We recognize and appreciate your many contributions to both the campus and the local community. It is important to us that your experiences while living in Bowling Green are educational, pleasurable, and memorable. We want you to enjoy yourselves and to have a good time while you are learning.

If you decide to have a party off-campus, we ask that you do so in a responsible manner and in a way that shows concern for your neighbors. Contact your neighbors ahead of time and let them know about your plans. Urge them to call you first if the party becomes annoying to them. In neighborhoods containing both students and permanent residents, differences in lifestyles are inevitable, but you can help maintain friendly relations by avoiding excessive noise, littering, and other offensive behavior.

Above all, please be especially mindful of Ohio's underage drinking law. This state law prohibits the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages by anyone under the age of 21. Both University and City police have a duty to strictly enforce it. In addition, it is locally enforced from time to time by agents of the Ohio Department of Liquor

This is the time of year when many BGSU students will want to have parties and celebrate the coming end of the spring semester.

Control. You should also bear in mind that it is against the law in Ohio to possess an open container of any alcoholic beverage on public property no matter how old you are. Don't let a violation mar your record and possibly jeopardize your career prospects.

For those students who are graduating, we offer you our wholehearted congratulations and extend our best wishes for a happy and productive future. We hope that you will not forget the campus and community where you spent so many of your learning years, and that you will return from time to time as successful alumni. For those of you who will be returning after the semester break, we wish you a most enjoyable summer and look forward to seeing you in the fall.

Ron Zwierlein, interim vice president of student affairs, and Wes Hoffman, mayor of Bowling Green, co-authored this guest column.

A question of accuracy

Student accuses professor of inaccurate report

Richard Zeller, under the guise of protecting student rights to free speech, is doing more harm to the exchange of ideas in the classroom than he can imagine. Like Chicken Little in a children's story, Zeller is sounding the alarm and claiming the Bowling Green sky is falling under the weight of political correctness. And like Chicken Little's fear, Zeller's is all based on nothing, all in response to what is ultimately nothing.

Zeller is making accusations that have no support. His "research" has been questioned and contested by academic deans and his own colleagues. Engaging in a rational discourse with the man, and questioning how he collected his information is impossible because he operates on the plane of the reactionary. Zeller has "seen" the problem, an alleged preponderance of "political correctness" that requires undergraduate students to agree with their instructors or not receive a "good" grade, and he is sounding the alarm.

The question is "Where is Zeller's proof the problem exists?" His talk this past Tuesday was riddled with highly charged accusations against specific departments supported only by anecdote and conjecture, and a few points to his briefcase, which he claimed had all the secrets. Zeller could not even answer simple questions about what he has done to back up his accusations, nor has he been able to provide and reason why, if this problem is so widespread, more students have not come forward and formally complained.

Some students on Tuesday night attempted to offer reasons why they don't come forward - it's nice that so few students can speak for an entire campus population. One even claimed that it was of no use to try to contest the alleged "politically correct" ideologies because that would "mark" the student as "politically incorrect," which could, again allegedly, potentially hurt future chances for good grades. This student claimed it was "easier" to go along with the politics of the instructor rather than risk a low grade.

Whatever happened to intellectual courage? Why is it that such a pathetic, defeatist attitude is allowed to prevail as a valid argument? There is no support for this student's accusations, yet the student, who said he was a freshman, took these ideas to be the "truth."

This raises many questions about the effects of Zeller's survey:
■ At what point do Zeller's "findings" become relied on as undeniable "fact" and stereotype the classes/departments he has targeted? If students enter a classroom thinking "indoctrination" (in its most horrible sense, since you really cannot escape "indoctrination" no matter where you go) takes place there, is not the class already prejudged? Will they not "find what they expect to find?"

■ How do you account for what a student "feels" about his grade compared with what a student has actually done for his grade? In other words a student may "feel" he has been graded down for "political reasons" when in fact the poor grade is the result of a weak effort in thesis development, grammar, logic, explication of thought, etc. Again, since Zeller has no tangible support behind his accusations we cannot see for ourselves how students have been graded down for "political" reasons.

■ This survey marginalizes all leftist thought under one category, "political correctness," and makes it into a monolithic movement taking over this campus (an accusation which, when compared to other universities, is downright laughable). Don't these "findings" of Zeller's work toward limiting discourse in the classroom, and espouse a "politically correct" position of their own? What are the motives for Zeller's survey if not political motives?

■ Why has Zeller only targeted, at least on his two-page "Political Correctness at BGSU" handout, humanities departments? Is this to say that "political indoctrination" does not occur in the business school or in the "natural" sciences? Or is he afraid of offending the University's "bread and butter" - those recipients of government and corporate funding? Does he honestly think politics is absent from their classrooms?

Zeller should make public the questions he used to arrive at the "results" he has published. And perhaps he would get to the heart of the matter and share with us what would be his "ideal" classroom situation. And maybe those few worshipful, undergraduate students who have been supporting Zeller should learn how to think critically for themselves rather than rely on the reactionary, and intellectually undemanding, stance finger pointing at alleged cases of "political correctness."

Group opposes Klan rally

Citizens form Unity Coalition to educate against KKK

On March 15th, 1994 a group of citizens have a meeting. The topic of this meeting was the Ku Klux Klan rally, to be held on June 18, 1994. Concerned about the effect this rally would have on our community, we began to educate ourselves about the KKK, their rallies and their beliefs. By the end of the meeting, the Unity Coalition was formed.

The Unity Coalition has not been formed to debate the right to free speech, but to educate ourselves and the community about hate groups, such as the Klan, and to show our respect for all humankind.

Through the National Klan-watch we have learned that the greatest allies hate groups, such as the Klan, have in a community are fear and silence, and the greatest enemy is simple, unequivocal, public rejection. Recent history has shown that it doesn't take an army to drive the Klan out of town, (Klan groups have been known to return to towns a second and third time) a public statement of opposition from city officials, level-headed citizens carrying unmistakable messages of rejection, and a conspicuous absence of public participation at the Klan event is enough to discourage the Klan returning to recruit in most towns.

Some cities have gone even further to make their opposition known. A 1987 Klan march in Greensboro, N.C., drew 125 people, but the effect was diminished since the day before, about six times as many people were on hand for a celebration of racial harmony that was attended by city officials, ministers of different faiths, police officials and hundreds of citizens of all ages and colors.

For an effort like Greensboro to be successful, cooperation is needed not only from government, but from churches, schools, media and police. In the past, officials taken the to ways in which we, as citizens can address the short term and long-term effect this rally holds for our community.

Our goals as a Coalition include:

■ Holding a Unity Day rally the evening before the Klan rally, (June 17) to give citizens a voice to oppose the Klan and what they stand for. A peaceful event that will focus on brotherhood and togetherness as a community.

■ A symbol, a green "Unity

1st. for citizens to place in their windows.

■ Cooperation with police and city officials to help maintain safety and cut costs to the city by using volunteers to help set up and tear down fencing that police need to contain the rally site. Volunteers will also help clean up the area after the rally.

■ Assist businesses and residents around the courthouse area if they wish to have windows boarded, and to provide alternative activities for these people who do not want to remain in the area during the rally.

■ Hold a candle-light vigil led by churches and community leaders at the site of the KKK rally the evening of June 18, as a public statement of reclaiming our community.

For our goals to be met, we need the help and cooperation of many people. We hope that you will join us and help us turn this negative event that has been forced upon us, into a positive statement of community unity and respect for all humankind.

The Unity Coalition meets on Tuesday evenings at 7:30; please watch the paper for location of the next meeting. The Unity Coalition may be contacted at P.O. Box 73, Bowling Green.

Deborah Pirooz and Maryann Sandusky are residents of Bowling Green.

A symbol, a green "Unity Knot," is to be passed out to all citizens as a protest against the racial hatred and violence the Klan stands for.

stance that any public statement regarding Klan activities was simply free publicity. Now, more and more cities are beginning to recognize that if the Klan is allowed to march and recruit without any vocal opposition from the community, its chances of winning converts and stirring trouble is increased.

The Wood County Sheriff's Department, BG Police Department and the Wood County Commissioners have been most cooperative in helping to educate the Unity coalition as Knot," to be passed out to all citizens as a protest against the racial hatred and violence the Klan stands for.

■ Educate citizens about the Ku Klux Klan and other hate groups. Pamphlets and literature are being compiled now. A headquarters is being sought that will be manned with information to answer questions citizens may have.

■ A campaign to urge people to not attend the rally. Green signs have been printed that state "Don't Attend." These signs will be available on June

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CSO should worry about their image

The BG News:

If I were a member of the Conservative Students Organization I'd be concerned about those parody fliers too, but my concern would have a different focus. Instead of brying about the misuse of my organization's supposed good name by a pack of secretive cowards who might be (GASP) homosexuals as well, I'd be worried about the sheer number -- based on my anecdotal sampling -- of sensible human beings who weren't quite sure whether the parodies were, in fact, meant as parodies. Why were so many in the campus community unable to tell for sure? Had they all suddenly unknowingly ingested stupid pills or is it that those parodies, extreme as they are, aren't all that different in spirit from CSO's original fliers? Could it be that the parodies merely make explicit the swaggering nastiness implicit in the originals?

And to those souls, well-meaning and otherwise, who termed the parody fliers "jokes":

There is a huge difference between a joke and a parody. A joke is offered strictly for laughs, but parody enjoys a rich, political, serious history as it has often been used in many different cultures to expose ugly spectacles for the obnoxious travesties that they actually are. Judged in this context, the parodies of CSO seem to work just fine.

I know what at least some of you must be thinking by now, but I neither wrote nor posted the parodies.

On the other hand, I kind of wish that I had.

"We believe if you're not in the international marketplace," Voinovich said, "you don't know who your competition is. You may wake up some morning and find your competition is eating your lunch."

But the 800,000-member Ohio AFL-CIO believes NAFTA will mean Ohioans will pay the price.

"We remain as opposed to NAFTA now as we were six months ago," said AFL-CIO spokesman Kent Darr. "In the four months since NAFTA took effect, 33 American companies have announced plans to open offices in Mexico."

TRUCE

While U.N. officials said the truce was generally holding, Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic complained earlier in the day that "Gorazde is still a scene of fighting." He said the Serbs had "partly withdrawn, but not completely."

U.N. officials often play down truce violations to avoid having to call air strikes that could escalate fighting and wreck fragile negotiations.

About 200 peacekeepers arrived late Saturday in Gorazde and fanned out across the city. Another 300 peacekeepers due to arrive Sunday were held up at Sarajevo airport. The presence of the peacekeepers also diminishes the likelihood of air strikes, which could put them in danger.

U.N. helicopters evacuated wounded civilians from Gorazde, where the hospital was badly damaged in more than three weeks of relentless Serb pounding.

By early Sunday evening, six helicopters had brought about 40 wounded, including several children, to the Zetra Stadium in Sarajevo. Aid workers in Gorazde estimate that at least several hundred injured civilians require evacuation.

U.N. officials strongly criticized a Serb requirement that the helicopters land at a checkpoint for inspection on trips to and from Gorazde. "There will be death," said Dr. Genevieve Begkoyan of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees agency in Sarajevo. "If we wait and wait, people will be dying for lack of medical care."

Another U.N. aid spokesman, Peter Kessler, said patients on one helicopter "were very, very frightened about stopping on Bosnian Serb territory."

"The helicopters were checked quite thoroughly," he said. "The patients were terrified. The patients' ID cards were all compared to the manifest. And they were filmed. The Bosnian Serb military brought a TV camera into the helicopters."

A 14-truck U.N. relief convoy carrying nearly 90 tons of food to Gorazde left Belgrade early Sunday. But officials said Bosnian Serbs were denying it passage, saying it lacked authorization.

Ruling may have been leaked

Judges deny telling compensation decision before release

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- A long-awaited Ohio Supreme Court ruling on workers' compensation may have been leaked, and some justices may have been pressured to change their votes on the case, The Plain Dealer reported Sunday.

But all seven justices denied leaking the court's 5-2 decision before its April 8 release, which upheld most provisions of a new workers' compensation law, the newspaper said.

Chief Justice Thomas J. Moyer and Justice Paul Pfeifer said they heard from numerous sources that the decision was widely known before its release.

The two justices declined to say who was suspected of leaking the opinion but said more than one justice was involved.

"It is a serious problem," Moyer said. "I plan to bring this up in a private conference with the members of the court and see how they respond."

The newspaper said Justice Alice Robie Resnick may have been compelled to change her vote, but she denied being pressured. Resnick has an unpublished residential telephone number and could not be reached Sunday for additional comment.

The decision "was the worst-kept secret in town," Pfeifer said. "In the knew-too-much category, I would say clearly the administration knew, the political party officials knew and union leaders knew."

The Plain Dealer, citing sources familiar with the case, said three justices may have been pressured to change their votes.

The newspaper did not identify the sources or the justices.

"It is a serious problem. I plan to bring this up in a private conference with the members of the court and see how they respond."

Thomas J. Moyer, Ohio Supreme Court chief justice

Moyer said he learned of the leaks when a lower court judge called him three weeks before the decision was announced.

"He said, 'You'd better release the decision because everyone already knows what it says,'" Moyer said.

Resnick said Moyer told justices two days before the opinion was released that "the vote was out on the street."

The newspaper reported that others connected with the case, including justices, said the decision was known weeks -- and possibly months -- before its public release.

Voinovich Chief of Staff Paul Mifsud, who negotiated the workers' compensation law on the governor's behalf, said he never discussed any pending cases with the judges.

Justice Craig Wright wrote the opinion. Ms. Resnick, Moyer, Pfeifer and Justice Andy Douglas concurred, while Justices A. William Sweeney and Francis E. Sweeney dissented.

Caning causes sparks to fly

by Denis D. Gray
The Associated Press

SINGAPORE -- Six strokes of a cane on the buttocks of an American teen-ager would not seem to be an issue to arouse world leaders, ordinary citizens and editorial writers warning of a "clash of civilizations."

But that is what has happened in the case of Michael P. Fay, an 18-year-old student from Kettering, Ohio, who may be flogged for spray-painting cars and committing other acts of vandalism.

Imprisoned, he awaits a decision from the president of this island-republic on his clemency plea. But whether he is caned or not, the conflicts and frustrations that the case has sparked won't fade away.

Fay's "schoolboy pranks" -- as his defense lawyer called them -- have become enmeshed with Western and Asian concepts of human rights, the relation of punishment to crime and charges of American arrogance and Asian racism.

Singapore has been the leading exponent of "an Asian-style democracy" rather than one universal democratic concept.

The Asian version, espoused largely by authoritarian regimes, emphasizes social order, discipline, economic development and collective over individual rights.

Asia's "economic miracles" are attributed to such an approach.

"While we believe that an individual has certain rights, the overriding consideration has to be what is in the community's overall good," Minister of Home Affairs Wong Kan Seng said Saturday in defending Fay's sentence.

Singapore also has been a leading critic of what it sees as U.S. efforts to impose its political and human rights philosophies on the world, sometimes using economic pressure to do so. Other Asian nations have similar positions.

The Fay case has become a prime example. President Clinton has called Fay's punishment "excessive," and a New York Times editorial urged American companies in Singapore to pressure the government for clemency.

Denying charges that caning Fay is a political or racist act, Singapore says its tough laws are being carried out for the welfare of the community.

Local editorials have noted that Americans have not protested previous canings. About 1,000 people, virtually all of them Asians, are flogged each year.

Singapore also argues that harsh laws have kept the country relatively free of crime as well as graffiti. It says coddling of criminals and permissive attitudes have led to mayhem on American streets.

Senior Minister Lee Kuan Yew, the architect of modern Singapore, recently said the United States has "gone too far the other way" by not daring to "restrain or punish the individuals, forgiving them for whatever they have done. That's why the whole country is in chaos. Drugs, violence, unemployment and homelessness, all sorts of problems in its society."

It is debatable whether Singapore's laws are responsible for the low crime rate or whether this is more directly linked to abiding Confucian values of a tightly knit and prosperous society.

Analysts have noted that countries like Japan, Ireland and Finland, with far more liberal laws, have lower crime rates than Singapore's.

But Singapore's arguments have won converts, including sizeable numbers of Americans, judging from opinion polls and letters to newspapers. Pro-caning opinions seem to reflect frustration at the crime in everyday American life.

"That's a message from the American people that they believe too many people are getting away with serious crimes and not paying any kind of [price]," William Bennett, a Cabinet secretary under former President George Bush, said on a recent talk show.

Former New York Mayor Ed Koch has advocated amending the U.S. Constitution to allow caning, although in a less severe version than Singapore's, which draws blood and sometimes sends the victim into shock.

Unmarried Ohio teen-agers have high birth rate

by Katherine Rizzo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Ohio has one of the nation's highest birthrates among unmarried teen-aged mothers, and the highest rate of all other industrialized states, according to a report released Sunday.

The "Kids Count Data Book," a compilation of statistics published annually by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, said 10.6 percent of the children born in Ohio during 1991 were born to unmarried teens.

Only Arizona, Tennessee, North Carolina, Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama, New Mexico, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi and the District of Columbia had higher percentages.

"It's pretty distressing," said Mark Real, director of Children's Defense Fund of Ohio. "The states that are worse than us are all southern and southwestern states. We're not usually compared to them."

"Michigan and Pennsylvania, which I think most people would consider fair comparisons to Ohio, are much better."

Ohio scored 40th in the study. Indiana was 37th; West Virginia, 33rd; Kentucky, 32nd; Michigan, 31st; and Pennsylvania, 30th.

Ohio's birthrate among unmarried teens has been steadily rising. In 1985, single teen-agers accounted for 8.1 percent of the state's births; within six years, gradual increases had amounted to a 31 percent leap in the birthrate, the report showed.

"This is grim stuff, it really is. I think what it says is that we need to be doing more in Ohio," Real said.

"If there were a story saying Ohio was one of the 10 worst in terms of toxic waste, if we were 40th in high school graduation rates, there would be a big flurry on this," he said. "Yet there's not anybody in charge on this. Nobody is in charge."

Inquiries to state government press offices seemed to support that criticism.

The governor's office and the Ohio Department of Health recommended calling the Department of Human Services for information on teen pregnancy programs. Human Services recommended calling the Health Department.

That is not to say there is no state program for pregnant teen-agers.

Ohio spent $54.2 million in 1992 on pregnancy prevention programs, most of which went to finance jobs for teens deemed at high risk of becoming parents. A little less than $4 million of that total was spent on birth control or family planning education.

In addition, Ohio spent about $100.5 million on health care, food and welfare for teen mothers, and ran programs intended to keep young mothers in school.

Welfare in Ohio includes a provision directed only at teen-aged mothers. The amount of money in their monthly checks declines if they drop out of school and goes up if they remain in class.

Mental health care hurt by cost cutting

The Associated Press

DAYTON -- The dismantling of the state hospital system during the past 30 years has made it harder to get patients committed to mental hospitals, the Dayton Daily News reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Some police, judges and mental health professionals said severely mentally ill people have too much freedom to refuse hospitalization and medication, the newspaper said.

"We've got to be very careful in restricting freedoms, but the pendulum has swung so far the other way that it's hurting all of society," said Montgomery County Common Pleas Judge William MacMillan, a member of the county mental health board.

Like other states, Ohio has dismantled its state hospital system because of high operating costs and advances in medication. New medicines allow some people who once would have required hospitalization to function well as outpatients.

On an average day in 1961, Ohio mental hospitals had 25,490 patients. The newspaper said that number has dropped to an estimated 1,800, and state officials hope to reduce it to 1,200 by June 1995.

Meanwhile, the caseload for community mental health agencies has risen, but agency officials said they are not getting enough state funding to provide help for the influx of new patients. Several county mental health boards, including Montgomery County's, have sued the Ohio Department of Mental Health over the dispute.

"The social net that is supposed to be out there isn't there for them," county Sheriff Gary Haines said. "Let's medicate them and provide a safe, clean environment, instead of dumping them into society, where they can end up on the streets, in the jails, or in some of Ohio's prisons."

Studies have shown that most mentally ill people are not dangerous, the Daily News reported. For example, a Center for Psychosocial Rehabilitation study showed only 1 percent of severely mentally ill people are violence-prone, compared with 5 percent of the general population.

On April 1, Michael Mower became a shocking exception to the rule. Mower, who claimed to have knowledge of assassination conspiracies, shot and wounded two sheriff's deputies before killing his mother and himself at the Harrison Township hotel where they lived.

Mower had been diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia. In a 10-year period, he shot and wounded two people and twice threw rocks or bricks through windows in busy restaurants. Yet he did not get lasting help.

Mental health officials said Mower was typical of a small percentage of mental patients who bounce in and out of jails, courts and mental hospitals as their conditions fluctuate.

Under state law, patients generally must be deemed to be an active danger to themselves or others to be involuntarily hospitalized. The law requires their release when they no longer are a danger, even if the improvement is temporary.

Maj. James Olin, administrator of the county jail, said mentally ill people end up in the jail regularly -- some repeatedly.

"It's a major problem for us," Olin said. "We have a tough time getting them out of here and into the kind of facility where we feel they belong. We have problems, even on an emergency basis, getting people accepted at Dayton Mental Health Center. The system doesn't work."

Ohio University trustees choose 19th president

The Associated Press

ATHENS, Ohio -- Ohio University trustees elected the school's 19th president on Saturday.

Trustees picked Robert Glidden, 57, after a six-month search for a replacement for outgoing president Charles Ping. Glidden is provost and vice president for academic affairs at Florida State University.

"We're moving into a new time, a new history," Trustee Jeanette Grasselli-Brown said.

Glidden will take over the post at Ohio's oldest university on July 1st. He will earn $170,000 a year, $10,000 less than Ping.

Ping, 63, is stepping down after 19 years as president. He plans to take a one-year sabbatical before returning to OU as a professor.

Trustees also voted to raise undergraduate tuition by $44 a quarter and increase room-and-board fees by 3.5 percent. Current undergraduate tuition and fees for in-state students total $3,384.

Meanwhile, faculty and staff will get 4 percent raises next year.

Southern prom protests against racial comment

by Ken Berger
The Associated Press

WEDOWEE, Ala. — Prom night is supposed to be unforgettable for fine gowns, corsages, tuxedos and dancing the night away. In small-town Alabama, interracial dating split Saturday's big event.

Trouble began when Principal Hulond Humphries of Randolph County High School threatened to cancel the prom to prevent black students and white students from dating.

He later withdrew the threat, but the damage was done. The result was a high school prom and a protest prom.

About 50 couples attended the high school prom Saturday night with about 20 police officers watching over them. No trouble was reported.

ReVonda Bowen, a mixed-race student who was at the center of the controversy, arrived at the school prom with her white boyfriend in a candy-apple red Mercedes. She wore a sequined turquoise dress; her date wore a white tuxedo.

Bowen planned to attend the protest prom as well.

"We believe we're going to have the prettiest, nicest prom in Randolph County," said the Rev. Henry Sterling of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which helped organize the protest.

After his remarks, Humphries was suspended, then reinstated by the school board two weeks later. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and SCLC organized a student boycott of classes and put together the protest prom.

The controversy began in February, when Humphries, who is white, told a school assembly that he would cancel the prom if interracial couples planned to attend.

Bowen, 16, stood up and asked who should she date, given that her father is white and her mother is black.

Bowen recounted Humphries' response: "That's just it. Your mom and dad made a mistake, having you as a mixed race child."

She has a lawsuit seeking damages pending against Humphries and the county school board.

Humphries, in his 25th year as school principal, has not commented publicly on the matter. Reached at his home Friday night, he again declined comment.

His supporters have said his comments were misinterpreted or taken out of context and were a result of his frustration with a series of student fights.

The 680-student school has 422 white students and 258 black students. The 20,000 person county is about 76 percent white and 24 percent black.

Shadows surround D-Day

Families of soldiers want public to know whole story

by Robert Dvorchak
The Associated Press

Exercise Tiger began innocuously as a dress rehearsal for D-Day; it ended in cataclysm, with 749 U.S. soldiers and sailors dead in the English Channel.

But the next day — and for many days after that — no word of the disaster appeared in American newspapers. It had to be hushed up, lest the Germans know the Normandy invasion was imminent.

Fifty years later, the April 28, 1944, catastrophe is still shrouded in D-Day's shadows, much to the anguish of the men who survived it and the families of those who didn't.

"People should know the story. These men should be recognized," said Evelyn Brannock of Perry, Kan., whose brother, James Oliver Cottrell, was among the dead.

"There isn't anything about it in the history books. Nothing. Zero. It's kind of sad."

To mark the 50th anniversary, Brannock is among dozens of Americans heading to Slapton

Sands, England, for a cemetery service and to drop a wreath in the channel for the bodies never recovered. But those ceremonies will get little of the spotlight accorded the Normandy beaches this June.

Exercise Tiger was the U.S. 4th Infantry Division's final tuneup for D-Day. It involved 3,000 ships and 30,000 men outfitted in full battle dress.

The men and ships sailed into the channel to practice a landing at Slapton Sands. But the drill became a death trap when a pack of nine German torpedo boats operating from France stumbled onto the eight lumbering LSTs (landing ship tanks) of Convoy T-4 shortly after 2 a.m.

Two LSTs were sunk and a third was damaged in 30 minutes.

On LST 507, Navy medical officer Eugene Eckstam heard a deafening explosion and rushed to help trapped men.

"I got thrown back by the roar of the fire. I could hear guys screaming and hollering. I can still hear them," said Eckstam of Monroe, Wis.

LST 531 went under in 7 minutes, losing 424 of the 496 men on board.

"Bang! There was an explosion. Just a big ball of fire," said John Perry, of Johnstown, Pa. "The Germans just picked us off. We were sitting ducks. We never knew what hit us."

The final toll — 551 soldiers and 198 sailors dead, and 89 participants wounded — made Exercise Tiger the war's most deadly U.S. training exercise.

Some allied lapses worsened the tragedy, according to investigations.

The convoy was guarded by only one British ship. Additionally, because of a typographical error on operational orders, the American ships were tuned to the wrong radio frequency, so British warnings of German boats never reached them.

And GIs improperly buckled their flotation belts around their waists rather than up under their shoulders. Top-heavy with field packs, rifles, ammunition and steel helmets when they splashed into the 42-degree waters, many were found floating feet up.

Among those who handled the corpses was Emmett Bailey, a member of a graves registration unit.

"I didn't shed a tear at the time because it was my job. Now I can hardly keep my eyes dry when I think about it," said Bailey, of Henderson, N.C. "Things like that stick with you."

British newspapers published brief stories repeating German radio reports about some shipping being lost. The first official mention came at an Aug. 5 briefing when Exercise Tiger's casualties were included in post D-Day reports.

One final casualty came that same day. Rear Admiral Don P. Moon, in charge of the American part of the exercise, killed himself on his new assignment in the Mediterranean, due at least in part to admonishment from his superiors for the losses at Slapton Sands.

Years after the war, accounts of Exercise Tiger appeared in some military history books, but the Pentagon did not declassify its records until 1974.

South Africans to cast ballots

Out-of-country voters can still participate in first multi-racial election

by Ted Anthony
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Far from Johannesburg's turmoil, on a lush college campus, a young South African woman is preparing to do something her skin color denied her until now: vote.

It is an experience Tselane Mokuena has craved for years — and one she wonders if Americans appreciate enough.

"I really think Americans take their rights for granted. They don't know what it means not to have a vote," said Mokuena, 28, a social work student at Bryn Mawr College outside Philadelphia. "It's like people in the United States have lost hope."

For her, hope endures. Now years of it are coming to fruition for thousands of black South Africans living abroad. On Tuesday, the first day of their nation's first multiracial elections, they get the opportunity to vote — in the United States.

The South African government has set up polls at 21 locations across the United States, enfranchising anyone older than 18 who has a South African passport. Expatriates can apply for citizenship.

One of the polls will be at the Franklin County Board of Elections in Columbus, Ohio.

"This is a first, and we are trying to make sure it goes as smoothly as possible," said Stephen Grundlingh, South African consul in New York City.

Estimates of the number of South Africans in the United States range from 10,000 to 200,000.

The secret paper ballots bear candidates' photos and party logos — from the ANC and the National Party to the "Keep It Straight And Simple Party." Ballots will be flown home in sealed containers within 24 hours, Grundlingh said.

African National Congress President Nelson Mandela, imprisoned for nearly three decades under apartheid rule, is widely expected to become president.

Across the United States, representatives of the South African government and the ANC said they have fielded hundreds of phone calls during the past two weeks.

"I don't know anyone who doesn't plan to vote — anyone," said Biki S. Minyuku, an ANC member who works in Philadelphia's community affairs department and is coordinating balloting in Philadelphia.

Many say the election holds lessons for Americans.

"The reasons for apathy that exist here do not yet exist in South Africa," said Dennis Brutus, chairman of Africa Network.

Men's track nipped by BSU

Bowling Green's Rick Marinelli gets prepared to throw his javelin during the track teams meet against Ball State. The Cardinals edged out the Falcons 82-81.

by Andy Dugan
News sports writer

Men's track coach Sid Sink should be a psychic in his spare time.

Last week he predicted the men's first home meet of the season, which was against Ball State Saturday, to be extremely close and would probably come down to the last event. He was right, unfortunately in the wrong way, as the Falcons lost 82-81.

"We needed a meet like this where we had to go after it throughout the entire meet without letting up," Sink said.

Although the Falcons came up short, Sink said he was pleased with his athletes' performances.

"It came down to the mile relay just as I thought it would," Sink said. "It was disappointing to lose, but I'm very happy with the team's effort."

Sink said the performance of the team was one of the best of the season.

"It was as good a performance as any this year and that's just where we want to be at this point in the season," Sink said. "You want everyone to be running well."

As far as the sprints, Sink knew Ball State would be tough. That is why he said he was especially pleased with senior sprinter Shawn Blanchett's performance. Blanchett backed up teammate Scott Thompson with a third-place finish in the 100 (10.8) and a second-place finish in the 200 (22.21). Thompson was second in the 100 (10.7), first in the 200 (22.13), and also won the 110-meter high hurdles (14.07).

"The effort was really good, especially in the sprints," Sink said. "Shawn Blanchett was a key member in this meet. As a senior, he's really coming around. I feel bad that he and the team got beat, but not in their effort getting there."

Sink said he was also pleased with Travis Downey's performance in the pole vault. Downey won with a height of 16-6.

"The pole vault was good," Sink said. "16-6 is pretty good."

The distance events also had strong showings despite a lack of continuous pressure, according to Sink.

"I thought the distance crew ran well considering there wasn't much competition," Sink said.

In the 3000-meter steeplechase, the distance crew did have some competition as Rob Bowman took third (10:05.3) and Dave Exner was fourth (10:29.9).

In the 1500-meter run, Brad Schaser and Tim Arndt ran away with the top two places, both clocking 4:00.3. Schaser also won the Falcon-dominated 800-meter run (1:56.7), followed by Glen Lubbert in second (1:57.9), Mark Sheidler in third (1:59.2), Scott Powell in fourth (2:03.4), and Howard Whitehead in fifth (2:05.9).

Aside from a second-place finish by a Cardinal in the 5000-meter run, BG was also dominant in this event. Deric Kenne won with 15:23.65, followed by Arndt in third (16:17.97), Bowman in fourth (16:23.33) and Jim Zurbuch (18:07.13).

First-place finishers for the Falcons included: Adam Rose in the shot put with 52-0; Curt Mellett in the 400-meter run (48.90); Dennis Hampton in the triple jump (42-6.5); and the 400-meter relay of Hampton, Thompson, Mellett, and Blanchett won with a time of 41.54.

Other placers for BG were: Tony Franks, third in the hammer throw (145-9); followed by Mike Freeman in fourth (139-1); Rick Marinelli, second in the javelin with 164-11, followed by Adam Eibling in fourth (159-1) and Mike Miller in fifth (155-0); while Hampton was third in the long jump with 21-3.5.

Geoff Fiedler was third in the shot put with 50.75, while Freeman was fifth with 45-8; Brian Sabo was third in the pole vault with 15-4; and in the 400-meter run, Darren Braddix was second (49.93), Chris Stueve was fourth (50.85), and Dave Kiessling was fifth (51.82).

In the discus, Freeman was third (149-4), Franks was fourth (141-7), and Miller was fifth (129-7); Marty Rosciszewski was second in the 400 hurdles (54.9); and Steve Elliott was third in the high jump with 6-4.

Saturday at home marked the sixth time this year Ohio University beat the BG women's track team, 77 to 69. BG, however, did manage to distance itself from Central Michigan who finished the meet with 35 points.

Head coach Steve Price talked about the BG-OU rivalry that has developed this year, "it's a good rivalry - a friendly rivalry. We enjoy the competition - I just wish we could win one," he said.

This year, BG has been outscored on average by OU by 20 points a meet. There was only a eight-point margin Saturday.

A loss of only eight points can be a confidence builder for BG.

"I think it made my team think that we can beat OU, and I feel that we can still have a shot at the MAC Championship," Price said.

BG competed well and there were many great performances to keep the score close to OU.

Last week, the 400-meter relay Julie Shade, Jane Moeller, Clarice Gregory, and Kaleitha Johnson broke the school record in the event. Saturday they broke the record again and won the event with a time of 46.62 seconds.

Freshman distance runner Laura Hall won the 5,000-meter run with a time of 17:37.3.

Traci Losi, a sophomore distance runner, took the 1,500-meter when she ran a time of 4:37.6.

Junior team captain Jane Moeller won the 100 hurdles with a time of 14.57. Moeller also took second in the long jump when she reached the distance of eighteen feet.

Indoor All-American Nikki Lessig continued her winning ways as she took the shot put with a hurl of 45 feet, seven and one-fourths inches. Lessig also took second in the discus with a throw of 153 feet eight inches.

Freshman Nikki Sturzing placed in two events. Her throw of 125 feet 11 inches in the javelin gave her a second-place finish. In the discus, her throw of 152 feet and one inch gave her a third-place finish.

Michelle Mueller, a freshman middle runner, finished second in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:19.11.

Freshman Patience Jones placed second in the 400-meter

Bengals choose 'Big Daddy' with top slot

by Joe Kay
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI - They got the man they wanted. The question now is whether the Cincinnati Bengals can sign Dan Wilkinson in time so he can have the impact they want.

The Bengals opened the NFL draft Sunday by choosing the Ohio State defensive lineman, a move everyone expected. General manager Mike Brown said he never came close to trading the No. 1 pick to any of the 21 teams that inquired.

So far, he's not even close to a contract agreement, either. Brown and agent Leigh Steinberg - who's had two protracted negotiations with the Bengals over first-round picks - exchanged salary proposals last week that were worlds apart.

"Signing is always a bit of a chore," Brown said Sunday. "I know this will be an expensive player. I have to have faith we will get it done. We almost always get it done."

"There seems to be a little bit of a mating dance as you work to sign them. I'm sure this might not be an exception. But we're confident that we'll sign him."

The Bengals and Steinberg exchanged salary proposals last week that weren't even close on money and terms. Steinberg said the Bengals' five-year proposal was $500,000 a year less than the approximately $2.3 million a year that No. 1 pick Steve Emtman got from Indianapolis in 1992.

They're also far apart philosophically. Steinberg wants "voidable years" - a chance to void the final few years of a contract if certain performance goals are met. Brown refuses, saying voidable years aren't practical under the league's new salary cap.

So it looks like a good chance for another long negotiation with Steinberg, who represented two of the Bengals' notable first-round holdouts. Defensive lineman Jason Buck (1987) and quarterback David Klingler (1992) missed all of training camp after they were chosen.

Money was on Brown's mind Sunday. The Bengals had a life-sized, black-and-white cutout of Wilkinson in the media room after their selection. Brown opened his wallet, took out a dollar bill and pretended to put it in Wilkinson's hand.

It was on Wilkinson's mind, too. During a conference call, he repeatedly mentioned his desire for a fair contract.

"I'd just like to be compensated fairly, as anybody would," Wilkinson said. "I'd like to take care of business as soon as possible."

If Wilkinson signs before training camp, he'll be listed as a starter the day he shows up. Defensive coordinator Larry Peccatiello would like to have Wilkinson and John Copeland, the Bengals' top pick last year, in a four-man line with Alfred Williams and Tim Krumrie. Wilkinson and Krumrie would play inside.

Defense has been a major problem for years in Cincinnati. The Bengals had the second-worst rushing defense last season and the second-fewest sacks in the league.

"Defense starts with your front four," Peccatiello said. "When you get a Dan Wilkinson, that's one step in that direction towards accomplishing what you want to do - have four dominant players."

"He has a lot of growth ahead of him, a lot of learning. I hope we get him signed early and get him into camp. It would enhance his opportunity to contribute early."

Wilkinson, 21, played just two seasons at Ohio State. The Bengals look at him as a long-term investment - someone who will take awhile to reach his potential.

"No one, including Dan Wilkinson, is going to come into the National Football League and play like King Kong," Brown said. "He's a youngster. He's going to learn some things."

After being labeled the "frontrunner" for the vacated head coaching position for the basketball team at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va., Jim Larranaga withdrew his name from the list of candidates Sunday morning.

"After looking into Old Dominion I sat back and looked at my own situation," Larranaga said. "My family and I are very happy here in Bowling Green."

Had Larranaga taken the position at Old Dominion he would have received a salary package that would have roughly doubled his current $70,000 base that he earns at Bowling Green.

The fact that his son Jay, a sophomore guard on the basketball team, chose to attend Bowling Green played a big part in Larranaga's decision.

"Last year Jay had a lot of scholarship offers and decided to come to Bowling Green," Larranaga said. "This time the shoe is on the other foot and I really couldn't see myself leaving Jay or the other players."

Larranaga, who guided the Falcons to the semi-finals of the Mid-American basketball tournament this past season, will have his top 10 players return. In addition, Larranaga has signed two All-Ohio recruits - Denny Amrhein and Jason Williams.

Women's tennis team gains weekend split

by Garrett Walkup
News sports writer

Under a sea of parents wearing neon orange BG hats, the women's tennis team ended their two-year MAC drought and snapped their three-match losing streak by dropping the University of Akron 8-1.

After losing the first singles match, the Falcons decided that was enough and won the remaining eight matches -- six of those were won in straight sets giving BG the win.

One of the victories was recorded by sophomore Patty Bank at second singles and second doubles. She won her singles match 6-3, 6-1. Bank played very well despite her chronic shin splints that had her legs taped up tighter than a grip on a racket.

Akron did not have much of a chance, losing five of six singles players last year. There were four freshmen in the Zip line-up including two walk-ons.

After the season-ending banquet on Friday night where players, the coach and parents were honored for their efforts, the team came out fired up for their match against an equally talented Toledo Rocket squad Saturday.

The match was both teams' final one of the year, and what a match it was.

"No matter how talented the teams are, you can always throw away both teams' records," UT head coach Judy Johnson said. "It was a classic UT-BG rivalry."

The singles matches were only a prelude to the great doubles play. The singles matches were split three apiece. Getting wins in singles play was Cindy Mikolajewski at third, Kassie Hembree at fourth, and Karen Micus at the sixth singles position.

To make things more dramatic, two of the doubles matches were split. Hembree and Micus teamed to win the third doubles, but UT won the second. The score was 4-4 and the whole day came down to who won at first doubles.

Freshman Jennifer Schwartz and injured co-captain Erin Bowbeer lost in three sets in the first doubles and the Rockets got the win 5-4.

"Everyone played their hearts out," Bowbeer said. "You can't ask for more than that."

This weekend's golden racket goes to junior co-captain Karen Micus who went 4-0. Her two most impressive wins came on Friday against Akron. She won her sixth singles match, blanking her opponent 6-0, 6-0. Then Micus and Hembree won their third doubles match also without giving up a single game 6-0, 6-0. Micus also played very well Saturday against Toledo, winning her singles match 6-1, 6-1, and taking the doubles match.

"My singles has definitely improved since the beginning of the year -- I feel more relaxed on the court, and Kassie [Hembree] has helped me a lot," Micus said.

Starting next Thursday is the MAC Tournament at Eastern Michigan.

Steelers sign Williams

by The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH -- The Pittsburgh Steelers didn't wait until the NFL draft to replace fullback Merrill Hoge, signing free agent John L. Williams of the Seattle Seahawks to a two-year contract.

Williams is one of the NFL's top 10 rushers over the last five seasons, but was relegated mostly to a blocking back's role last season.

"The guy is a complete fullback," Steelers director of football operations Tom Donahoe said. "He brings toughness and leadership to your team."

Williams signed a two-year contract worth $700,000 this year and $600,000 in 1995. Incentives could boost his salary to nearly $1 million each season.

The Steelers not only get a fullback who has been more productive than Hoge, but one who didn't cost as much. Hoge signed a three-year, $2.4 million deal with the Chicago Bears.

Williams, 29, is in his ninth NFL season and has rushed for 4,579 yards and 17 touchdowns. He was a two-time Pro Bowl pick.

He also was the Seahawks' leading receiver three times, was voted the team's most valuable player twice and was their offensive captain the last two years.

Williams' 471 career receptions are fifth in NFL history among running backs. He caught 74 passes in 1992; the Steelers' record for a running back is 50 by Hoge in 1988.

Braves break out of slump, Cincinnati red-hot at home

by The Associated Press

Braves 3, Pirates 0
ATLANTA -- Greg Maddux ended Atlanta's longest losing streak in a year at four games Sunday, pitching a three-hitter and striking out a career-high 11 as the Braves beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0.

Maddux (4-1) allowed only three singles in lowering his ERA to 0.88 and retired 16 of his last 17 batters.

The right-hander, who has won the NL Cy Young Award two straight years, walked none in his second complete game this season and first shutout since last Aug. 15. It was his 51st complete game and 15th shutout.

Atlanta hadn't had a losing streak this long since they dropped five straight last April 25-29.

The Braves failed to take advantage against Steve Cooke (0-3), hitting into a pair of double plays in the first three innings and having a runner thrown out at the plate in the fourth.

Atlanta managed a run in the second when Cooke walked Fred McGriff and Dave Gallagher and allowed a single to David Justice, loading the bases. McGriff scored when Javier Lopez hit into a double play.

The Braves chased Cooke in the seventh. Lemke led off with his first homer of the year, Maddux doubled and Deion Sanders had a bunt single. Reliever Dan Miceli then struck out Jeff Blauser and got Terry Pendleton to hit into a double play.

Lemke made it 3-0 in the eighth with an RBI single off Mark Dewey that scored McGriff, who opened the inning with a walk and moved to second on a walk to Justice.

Reds 5, Marlins 2
CINCINNATI -- Reggie Sanders bounced two hits off the centerfield fence, then drove a three-run homer into the second deck Sunday as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Florida Marlins 5-2.

Sanders tripled in the first, doubled in the fourth and homered in the fifth, all off Chris Hammond (1-2).

straight complete game, struck out five and walked none as the Reds won for the eighth time in 10 home games. Browning, who retired the side in order six times, pitched a two-hit shutout last Sunday against Philadelphia.

Hammond gave up four runs and eight hits in 6-2-3 innings.

Florida took a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Browning hit Rick Renteria with a pitch, Jeff Conine singled with one out and Orestes Destrade reached on an error by first baseman Hal Morris, with Renteria scoring and Conine taking third. Benito Santiago then hit a sacrifice fly.

Cincinnati got a run in the fourth when Sanders doubled, went to third on Kevin Mitchell's single and scored on Hammond's wild pitch.

Sanders' homer, his fourth, came after Browning singled and Morris walked in the fifth. Cincinnati added a run in the eighth when Mitchell doubled and scored on Brett Boone's sacrifice fly.

Indians 12, Rangers 7
ARLINGTON, Texas -- Albert Belle and Manny Ramirez each had three hits and drove in three runs Sunday, leading the Cleveland Indians past the Texas Rangers 12-7.

Belle hit a two-run homer, his third of the season, for a 6-2 lead in the third inning against Steve Dreyer (0-1).

Ramirez singled three times. The Indians had 17 hits and finished with 43 in the three-game series.

Charles Nagy (2-0) won despite allowing six runs in five innings. Eric Plunk pitched 3-2-3 innings and Derek Lilliquist got the last out with the bases loaded for his first save.

Ramirez hit a two-run single that capped a four-run first inning. A throwing error by shortstop Manuel Lee set up the outburst.

Dean Palmer hit his first home run of the season, a two-run shot in the Texas second. He hit 33 homers last year.

The Indians scored four more runs in the fourth against James Hurst. Belle, Ramirez, Eddie Murray and Paul Sorrento each had RBI singles for a 10-2 lead.

Doug Strange hit a two-run homer and Palmer had an RBI single in the Texas fifth.

Cavs blow by aging Celtics

by Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio -- The Cleveland Cavaliers set up another playoff series with long-time nemesis Chicago by beating the Boston Celtics 117-91 Sunday behind 22 points from John Williams.

Cleveland (47-35) clinched the sixth seed in the Eastern Conference and will open the first round Friday at Chicago against the third-seeded Bulls. Chicago has ousted the Cavs from the playoffs four times in the last six years.

The Celtics (32-50) finished their worst season since they were 29-53 in 1978-79, the year before Larry Bird arrived.

Robert Parish, Boston's 40-year-old center who now becomes a free agent, received standing ovations from the sellout crowd of 20,273 when he was introduced and again when he left the game with 1:54 remaining. Referee Dick Bavetta handed him the game ball when Parish walked onto the floor to acknowledge the second ovation.

The Cavs' front line of Williams, Tyrone Hill and Bobby Phillips combined to make 22 of their 27 shots. Hill made his first seven shots -- giving him 16 in a row over three games before finally missing a jumper with five minutes left in the third quarter.

Hill scored 20 points on 7-for-8 shooting, Terrell Brandon scored 14 and Phillips and Gerald Wilkins had 13 each. Mark Price had 10 assists.

Dee Brown, Kevin Gamble and Xavier McDaniel each scored 16 for Boston. Parish had 15 points and nine rebounds.

Cleveland, frequently beating the Celtics with layups and dunks, sank 72 percent of its shots in the first half, including 16 of 19 (84 percent) in the second quarter.
